Science Fiction
The Setting	Technology	What Characters Say or Do

Note: Writers of science fiction include details that help readers realize that the story is taking place in the future. For example, they describe the way characters do things and the place in which they live. They always include technology—usually something that has not been invented in the present time. Characters may behave in ways that are not like today’s people. In column 1, list details of the setting (what it looks like; how people do their work, enjoy themselves). In the second column, list technology that the writer has described. In the third column, list what characters think, feel, or do related to the setting and technology.
