INTRODUCTION

This collection represents the poetry about sports and other activities that both boy and girl students liked best, but I confess that boys were my target audience as I searched for these poems. Jocks, too, need to know that they can find their feelings and experiences spoken for in poetry, and that their own poems are a way for them to consider and name the satisfactions of movement, speed, power, competition, and fandom, as well as the heartaches of the sporting life.
